Class of 1977

With an award-filled career in the communications industry and now a 15-years-and-counting role as a realtor, Jennifer Mann Robertson has earned more than her share of professional awards. But her son, Brock, said this lofty level of professional success “pales in comparison to the superhero-like career she has had as a mother and now grandmother.” Robertson was just beginning to taste the sweet nectar of professional success in the telecommunications industry when, at the age of 26, she gave birth to twin girls born eight weeks premature. Both had intracranial brain bleeds and doctors gave them almost no chance of surviving. Thirty-one years later, daughter Ashley is still very much a part of the family. Although she has cerebral palsy and is mentally and physically challenged, she has defied the odds and is able to talk, walk and, her brother says, is a friend to everyone she meets. She even graduated from high school, thanks in large part to the love and care provided by her dedicated mom. Today, Robertson is a realtor in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, and she continues to be recognized as one of the top agents in the state by the business media and her associates.
